CQ PRESS UPGRADES FLAGSHIP ONLINE RESOURCE WITH EXPANDED CONTENT AND POWERFUL FEATURES

Washington, DC, March 2006—CQ Press has just released CQ Researcher Plus Archive, an exciting new online resource that adds both depth and relevance to issues past and present for users across a broad spectrum of audiences. CQ Researcher Plus Archive is an enhanced and upgraded online edition of the flagship CQ Researcher resource. This fully searchable database has added 3,000 new in-depth reports covering U.S. and global issues from 1923 to the present.

The excitement for this new product has been building for months. Librarians who previewed CQ Researcher Plus Archive immediately recognized what an outstanding, comprehensive resource it will be in a wide range of research settings. Users will discover over 80 years of expert, unbiased reporting on issues in the news presented in a highly organized and easy-to-use online format.

CQ Researcher Plus Archive is loaded with powerful features, including the amazing new “Issue Tracker” tool. “Issue Tracker” lets users quickly and easily research the development of hot topics and events that have influenced citizens and policy in the U.S. and the world and explore how issues and institutions have evolved over time. These new features and content, combined with new, performance-enhancing search and browse tools, ensure that this resource will be a “must have” addition to high school, community college, undergraduate, and public library collections.

New Expanded Content—New Online Enhancements

The release of CQ Researcher Plus Archive is the culmination of over a year’s work of digitizing the complete archive of Editorial Research Reports, the venerable precursor to CQ Researcher, which was published from 1923 to 1990. Adding this new content expands the utility of this online resource, infusing it with a new historical dimension that extends coverage beyond politics and current events to the fields of history, sociology, cultural studies, and other social sciences.

To meet the needs of today's researchers seeking accessible online content from a trustworthy source, CQ Press has developed a number of enhancements to the functionality of this online resource. CQ Researcher Plus Archive includes new, powerful search options, advanced browse capabilities including the new "Issue Tracker," and useful tools such as CQ Press's exclusive CiteNow!™, which enables users to automatically generate citations in APA, Bluebook, Chicago, or MLA styles.

A Unique Resource with a Legacy

Every year, new customers subscribe and current customers renew their subscriptions to CQ Researcher, proving that this is the first choice of librarians and researchers seeking original content that is offered by no other print or online resource. Published in print and online 44 times a year, each single-themed report is a unique work, investigated and written by a seasoned journalist. The trustworthy facts and expert, unbiased analysis presented in this award-winning resource are supplemented with a chronology of the featured issue, useful tables, graphs, and photographs, and an exclusive pro-con section featuring essays from leading experts. All reports provide a bibliography and links to other helpful resources.

The historical content of CQ Researcher Plus Archive is available to libraries as a one-time purchase with ownership rights. Multiple subscription and ownership pricing options are available for current and recent content.
